Tanzania: Officials on the island of Zanzibar continue to fear a coup attempt, according to the US Consulate. The island's army detachment has been put on standby alert, and in the last few days the police have been searching all incoming air and sea shipments for arms. The Zanzibaris were already jumpy because of recent coup rumors on the mainland, and the assassination of the president of Somalia made them even more edgy. Although eight alleged coup plotters were arrested on the mainland earlier this month, there is no evidence now that there is a serious threat to either the mainland or island government.
